

JGLR EDITOR SEARCH

The International Association of Great Lakes Research seeks a dynamic, well-organized scientist with high editorial standards and strong leadership skills to serve as Editor-in-Chief of the Journal of Great Lakes Research (JGLR).

The Editor should be a respected scholar in the Great Lakes research community, independent, and evenhanded. Applicants are expected to be committed to continuous improvement of JGLR and to be proactive in attracting stimulating and innovative contributions in the traditional disciplines and emerging fields, and in increasing the geographical representation of published papers on large lakes of the world. As Editor-in-Chief, you will report directly to the Board, have full authority to accept or reject submitted manuscripts, be responsible for the disposition, have full use of the Elsevier web-based editorial tracking and the review process for all submitted manuscripts, recruit qualified Associate Editors, and solicit and oversee special topics issues. The Editor also serves as an ex-officio member of the IAGLR Publications Committee and will work with the committee and the IAGLR business office with regard to developing and executing a business plan for JGLR. The Editor will receive a negotiable annual honorarium, and a budget to cover expenses for office support, technical editing, and graphics, and for travel to IAGLR Board meetings.

The Publications Committee is conducting the search and will evaluate candidates and conduct personal interviews with a small number of highly qualified individuals. The IAGLR Board will make the final selection and appointment. It is anticipated that the term of appointment will be for four years and will begin as soon as possible.
